

ALTUSCIO NETWORKS ANNOUNCES ALTUHAAS™ SERVICES FOR SMALL BUSINESS

Atlanta, GA; December 1, 2010. Altuscio Networks (Altuscio), an Atlanta-based full service Information Technology company supporting small and medium sized business throughout the greater Atlanta area, announced their AltuHaaS™ "Hardware-as-a-Service" solution designed for small business owners who have grown to need comprehensive IT services but would rather not make an up-front capital investment in workstations, network infrastructure and software licenses.

According to Mr. Silliman, "We have developed a product that lets any business owner shift significant resources from a one-time capital expense into cost effective fixed payments over time. Instead of spending thousands, or tens of thousands on depreciating computer assets, you can put that money to better use and still get all the brand new hardware and software you need; while filing it as a simple office expense item for tax purposes (of course you'll need to get the opinion of your CPA to be sure it fits your company profile.) AltuHaaS is great for companies who have old workstations and out of date software; you can upgrade immediately and benefit in the long run too."

"Many companies absolutely need the new equipment but can't afford the cash outlay to get started. AltuHaaS™ solves that" added Silliman. "We are able to make the new equipment affordable for our customers while simultaneously improving their IT experience on a daily basis. It's a win-win situation."
